180 HOUSE
LONDON

Introduction by Kate Bryan
Soho House Chief Art Director

The Soho House art collection at 180 The Strand includes over 100 artists, all of whom have a strong relationship with the London art scene. The collection responds to both the Brutalist landmark building itself and the high quality of both emerging and museum-level talent that show work in the capital.

A piece of living history, the rooftop has a large double-wall installation of 70 artworks that were created during the global pandemic. It features scenes and messages as diverse as: queues to buy guns in middle America (David Risley); socially distanced queuing for a supermarket in the rain (Christabel Blackburn); BLM protest imagery (Danny Augustine); dancing as an act of resistance (Kemi Onabule) and poem paintings, such as "if you like you can just snog me and then drop me off at the hospital" (Gommie). United by the difficult circumstances in which they were created, each work is framed in a bright colour as a reminder of the city's collective rainbow response to the social isolation of lockdown.

The collection also features several museum-level stand-alone pieces, including works by Donna Huanca, Marilyn Minter, Ángela de la Cruz, Lynette Yiadom-Boakye and Megan Rooney. Artists who joined the collection for the first time include: Yinka Ilori, Alexandria Coe, Richard Mark Rawlins, Ryan Driscoll, Juliana Huxtable, Jemima Kirke and Cherelle Stapleton.
